

Washington, DC- Today, Congressman Adler commemorates Women's Equality Day, marking the 1920 passage of the 19th amendment to the constitution. Established in 1971 by former Congresswoman Bella Abzug, Women's Equality Day honors the historic vote and calls attention to continuing efforts toward full equality for women in the United States.

"Today, 89 years after women obtained the right to vote, the road to equality is still not finished," said Adler. "We have a responsibility to continue our course of progress until all doors have been opened and the glass ceiling has been smashed."
